I was thrown from my horse 6 or 7 years ago, and suffered a severe wound of the side, which was aggravated by disordered kidneys. Eleven months ago I was attacked with pneumonia and blood-spitting, and was confined to the house for six months, and was unable to cross the floor without assistance. My physician did me no good. Having read in your issue of the 10th of March, 1882, of the wonderful cures effected by your Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, I decided to use it. I took it for three weeks, and my pains have left me, and I believe I have secured the remedy a year ago I should then also have been cured.

Mrs. Burgess

Alexandria, Va., August 4, 1881.
About 10 months ago I was considerably troubled with a constant desire to urinate. On the recommendation of Captain J. C. Graham I began to use Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, and it has effected an entire cure in my case.

Thousands of equally strong endorsements—many of them in cases where the patient had been abandoned—have been voluntarily given, showing the remarkable power of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure in all diseases of the kidneys, liver and urinary organs. If any one who reads this has any special trouble, remember the great danger of delay.

Points about Courtship.

In reversing a decision in a seduction case from Loudoun county yesterday Judge P. X. administered some practical advice on the subject of courtship. Frank Rice was tried for seduction under promise of marriage. At the trial it was testified that he met the young lady at church and offered her his umbrella. He accompanied her home that night and several others for about a year. Finally one evening he accomplished his ruin, on a road a little way out of town. She testified that he promised to marry her before she was seduced, but he denied this. It was shown that he had only been in her house four times during the whole year he was acquainted with her, and it was argued therefrom that this was not enough evidence to corroborate a promise of marriage. The Judge below held substantially that any circumstance might corroborate the promise of marriage. The Supreme Court, however, reverses this. Judge Paxson, saying: "It was palpable error to instruct the jury that evidence to corroborate the promise in regard to the promise of marriage is no longer necessary. The act of March, 1850, expressly provides that the promise of marriage shall not be deemed established unless the testimony of the female established is corroborated by other evidence either circumstantial or positive. The Judge below also erred in charging the jury that, in this case, the fact of the making of presents, writing of letters, and all such things that are between young people, to make it out, as one man may desire to court a girl he desires to make his wife in a secluded place, or he may desire to keep quiet. Another may be in the habit of keeping company with a young lady and appear upon the public highway from time to time, so that all one can see him; hence there is no standard. Each case must stand on its own legs as the parties built it up." This instruction was not calculated to aid the jury in arriving at a correct conclusion. In view of the character of the evidence, it is not only inadequate, but misleading and erroneous. The instructions from which jury were permitted to infer a promise of marriage were of an equivocal character. The plaintiff in error had been in the house of the defendant but four times, and she had never seen him for a short time. He met her on the highway, sometimes at the church, and at home with her, and left at the gate. This is not the kind of intercourse that usually takes place between persons engaged to be married. I may lead to matrimony, but it is quite as likely to lead to something else. Circumstantial evidence of an engagement of marriage is to be found in the proof of such facts as usually accompany that relation. Among them may be found mentioned letters, presents, social attentions of various kinds, visiting together in company, preparations for home-keeping and the like. Do not reverse."—Phil. Record

Winter Poets.

On Friday evening the men who went to rescue the Tiggart family from the snowdrift returned to Argenta with the bodies of Mr. Tiggart, his wife and five children, having dragged them five miles on rawhides over the snow. The bodies of the children were found in the snow in the afternoon. It is a deep gorge, with the sides rising so precipitously that a man cannot climb to the top of the ridge except by taking a zigzag course. The course of the slide was plainly marked. A vast body of snow, amounting to several hundred tons, had broken away from the apex of the ridge and gone down the steep, rocky side of the mountain, striking with terrific force at the bottom of the canyon and packing almost as hard as ice with its own momentum. The level space at the bottom of the canyon was about one hundred yards wide. The snow filled the entire space and dammed the creek. Finding the snow packed so hard that it had to be broken with picks the party gave up all hopes of finding the occupants of the cabin alive. After about two hours' hard work the roof of the cabin was reached. A little more digging revealed the upper logs of the cabin. Presently a bed-quilt was reached, and when the snow was cleared away the bodies could be felt under the bed-clothes. They proved to be Mr. Tiggart and his wife, lying side by side. When the snow was cleared away from their faces it was plain that death had overtaken them in the night. They were lying on their sides as if asleep. A little baby lay between, close to its mother's breast, where it seemed to be curled in its last half an hour's slumber. The snow was cleared away to find the other bodies. They were four children, all dead as if asleep, packed under about eight feet of snow nearly as hard as a rock. None of the bodies had any external injuries except that of the father, which was slightly bruised by a falling timber.—Salt Lake Tribune.
